SCAD Museum of Art

The SCAD Museum of Art showcases work by acclaimed artists, providing opportunities for students from all majors to learn from art world luminaries and expand their artistic points of view.

Mounting more than 20 exhibitions each year, the museum has presented such renowned artists as Jane Alexander, Uta Barth, Lynda Benglis, Alfredo Jaar, Sigalit Landau, Liza Lou, Angel Otero, Yinka Shonibare MBE, Kehinde Wiley and Fred Wilson. In the André Leon Talley Gallery, couture exhibitions such as “Little Black Dress,” “Oscar de la Renta: His Legendary World of Style” and Vivienne Westwood’s “Dress up Story—1900 Until Now” are curated alongside ever-changing, site-specific installations by such artists as Kendall Buster, Ingrid Calame and Odili Donald Odita. The museum’s permanent collection includes the Walter O. Evans Collection of African American Art, the Modern and Contemporary Art Collection, the Earle W. Newton Collection of British and American Art, the 19th- and 20th-century Photography Collection, and the SCAD Costume Collection.

The museum building itself is a work of art, demonstrating the university’s ongoing commitment to historic preservation and adaptive reuse. Constructed in 1853, the original walls feature handmade Savannah gray bricks, forming the oldest surviving antebellum railroad depot in the country. In 2011, this National Historic Landmark was transformed into an award-winning, modern museum building by architect Christian Sottile, a SCAD alumnus and dean of the SCAD School of Building Arts.

SCAD students are the heart of this teaching museum; they attend academic classes and career workshops, lecture series, film screenings, gallery talks and annual events within its storied walls. SCAD students also serve as museum docents, welcoming visitors, interpreting the exhibitions and interacting with illustrious museum guests. As a center for cultural dialogue, The SCAD Museum of Art engages students through dynamic, interdisciplinary educational experiences.

Museum awards

Since opening its doors in October 2011, the renovated museum has been celebrated for its inspired architecture and design, world-class exhibitions, and visionary community outreach and education programs that enrich art enthusiasts, educators and students of all ages.

About the Exhibition

“i feel ya: SCAD + André 3000 Benjamin” explores fashion, film and painting through the work of artist, musician, performer, fashion innovator and actor André Benjamin — known by his stage name André 3000 — as well as work by SCAD alumni Greg Brunkalla and Jimmy O’Neal.

More than a casual affirmation, “i feel ya” is an invitation to think critically and consider rhetorical expression. Phrases printed on custom jumpsuits designed by Benjamin initiate a powerful exchange, reflected in O’Neal’s large-scale abstract paintings alongside an experimental film directed by Brunkalla.

Benjamin’s 47 jumpsuits were originally created for the 2014 worldwide tour celebrating 20 years of Outkast’s music history. Revealing a sampling of Benjamin’s musings and observations — a response to today’s content-heavy digital landscape, which provides an unrelenting flood of images and opinions — “i feel ya” engages viewers as vital participants in a socially dynamic conversation.

Another central feature of “i feel ya” is a commissioned film, “Trumpets,” conceived and directed by Brunkalla and produced at the SCAD Savannah Film Studios. The film uses the thoughts and expressions on the jumpsuits as a creative point of departure to build a broader conversation about language and context. Three projectors cast words and phrases onto a single surface without syncing to the film itself — a spontaneous effect that creates a wholly unique experience for each audience and screening.

O’Neal’s series of mirrored paintings immerse viewers in Rorschach-inspired images as a stimulus for interpretation. Reaffirming the context of Benjamin’s and Brunkalla’s works, O’Neal also demonstrates the subjective nature of perception and meaning.

“i feel ya” is curated by Laurie Ann Farrell, executive director of SCAD museums and exhibitions. The exhibition is co-produced by André Benjamin and SCAD.

About the Artists

André Benjamin

As a versatile artist in music, performance, fashion design and film, André Benjamin has his finger on the pulse of contemporary culture. Benjamin's identity as an artist took flight in the pages of a sketchbook he kept as a teenager, and he later rose to international fame as a member of the six-time Grammy Award-winning musical group Outkast — the first hip-hop act to earn the coveted Album of the Year Grammy for 2004's Speakerboxxx/The Love Below, which sold more than 11 million copies. Benjamin has been a longtime supporter of SCAD, particularly through the university's Collaborative Learning Center, an interdisciplinary learning community that facilitates sponsored projects between SCAD students and external partners.

Greg Brunkalla

Greg Brunkalla (B.F.A. video/film) constantly strives to show truth in his subjects and their surroundings. He is a passionate, eclectic director, equally at home in live action, documentary, music promos and digital content. His recent work includes interactive installations and advertisements for Nike, HP, and Lincoln; music videos for Vampire Weekend, Danny Brown and Grouplove; a short documentary about LA street dancers for Coke Zero's "Make It Possible" campaign, which won a Silver Lion at Cannes; and a series of intimate celebrity interviews for The New York Times and W titled "Screen Tests," which earned him three Emmy nominations and a Webby Award.

Jimmy O'Neal

Jimmy O'Neal (B.F.A. illustration) is an Atlanta-born painter whose work focuses on the sciences of physics and biology. O'Neal has been featured prominently in international galleries, including exhibitions in Holland, Zurich, Paris and Atlanta. He was listed in the 1995 Guinness Book of World Records for creating the world's largest painting (80,000 square feet), which sparked his interest in large interactive installations. In 2003, his "brain machine," a device that paints from EEG connections, was included in "Painting 4," a large-scale exhibition at the Rose Art Museum of Brandeis University in Massachusetts that placed his work alongside paintings by Ingrid Calame, Katharina Grosse and Michael Lin.

Curriculum Guide Overview

This curriculum guide provides exercises based on National Core Arts Standards for high school students, extending learning opportunities from the museum to the classroom. It is intended to help educators create engaging classroom experiences that enhance students' understanding of works found at the SCAD Museum of Art.

“i feel ya: SCAD + André 3000 Benjamin” is a thought-provoking collaboration of three artists responding to a creative challenge with works that resonate among each other and yet remain true to their unique artistic identities. As a crossplatform, multidisciplinary exhibition, “i feel ya” provides a powerful example of the concept and process of collaboration, offering students exposure to diverse approaches and points of view. The following exercises are designed to promote understanding of collaboration as a tool to inspire, guide and support students as they explore creative careers.

This guide is intended for use by all audiences, however, the exhibition contains mature language and references. Discretion is advised for students under the age of 14.

Collaboration and Connection

“Collaboration is the key and I think what we were doing here is proof ... everything speaks to each other.”¹

André Benjamin

The collaboration and mutual respect demonstrated among the triumvirate of artists whose work comprises “i feel ya” reinforces the meaning behind the exhibition’s title. Benjamin’s custom jumpsuits, worn during Outkast’s 20th anniversary reunion tour, anchor the exhibit and inspired Brunkalla’s film, “Trumpets.” Accentuating both “Trumpets” and the jumpsuits are O’Neal’s oversized mirrored paintings.

The ability to collaborate is an essential skill in many professions. Collaborators start with a common vision, and move forward by sharing information, resources, ideas, and perhaps most importantly, enthusiasm.

The following interview with Brunkalla describes collaboration in action. It is excerpted from “Thread,” the official SCAD blog, and was conducted by university blogger Tarana Mayes.

T: What’s it like collaborating with an artist like André? Do you have any anecdotes from production about matching up artistic visions?

GB: André and I talked several times before the final idea came to be. The first thing I felt from André was an appreciation and respect for my work, and I hope he felt that tenfold from me. He’s known as a musician, but the feeling I get from him is that his creativity is boundless. Throughout the process, I wanted to respect André’s initial vision and approach, while still creating something that felt like it came from me. He was involved throughout the entire process, but ultimately he let me do my thing.

T: What did being in the familiar setting of Savannah and in the company of fellow SCAD students and alumni lend to the process?

GB: Savannah has a landscape you just can’t find anywhere else, so we embraced it. Having passionate students and alumni around to make things happen made things even better. Filmmaking is a team sport and there’s nothing better than having people show up that want to be there, and that’s how it felt working with SCAD.

The cross-platform collaboration between multi-hyphenate creative André Benjamin, filmmaker Greg Brunkalla, and painter Jimmy O'Neal reflects practices of artists whose success depends on an ability to work in partnerships. Some arts disciplines are collaborative by nature, such as filmmaking and the performing arts. Others, like painting, can be more solitary but still depend upon partnerships with other arts-related professions. Look at the list of arts occupations below. Which ones might a fine art painter collaborate with?

Use the space to the right to plot connections in a successful collaboration. Each circle will represent a different art profession. Start by imagining a creative career. Refer to the list of arts occupations or add your own.

Choose one circle to represent you, and label it with your name and future profession. Write the occupations you will rely on most in nearby circles. Connect these with lines and arrows to indicate a collaborative relationship. Who will your immediate partners collaborate with? Continue until you are satisfied with your team of creative talent.

Content and Context

“I’m hoping that people observe how a message’s meaning can change, or at least feel different, depending on its context.”²

Greg Brunkalla

Brunkalla’s film “Trumpets” shows moving portraits of a variety of people wearing black jumpsuits — similar to the jumpsuits worn by Benjamin and displayed in the gallery space. Each screen is paired with an old-fashioned carousel slide projector, which projects different thoughts and phrases on the jumpsuits. Because the messages and images change independently, Brunkalla prompts us to consider how the meaning of each phrase is contingent on the context of the film and the exhibition as a whole.

Greg Brunkalla, Trumpets, Film; 11 min., 12 sec., 2014

Content refers to the subject matter of an event, statement, idea or creative work. Context describes the circumstances that form the background for the content. Context can clarify interpretation or it can lead to false impressions.

How does the context — the setting combined with the age, gender and ethnicity of the individuals — affect your interpretation of the content, or the written text? Respond in the space below with words and drawings.

Consider all the ways you have seen text applied to objects, then imagine something that is not typically seen with text on it, or that has potential for text to be applied to it in an unusual way. How will your choice of medium affect what kind of text you can place on it? Describe or sketch it here.

HS Exercise c – part 2

Medium and Message

“What I wanted to say on the suits, Jimmy was actually saying in his paintings.”⁴

André Benjamin

After coming up with the idea of working with mirrored paint, O’Neal learned that it did not exist, and responded by experimenting until he invented a formula delivering the results he sought: the ability to paint marks that reflect with a mirror-like quality.

In this series of mirror paintings, O’Neal created patterns based on Rorschach ink blots, bilaterally symmetrical but otherwise unstructured images, which are well known for their ability to suggest varied interpretations.

Jimmy O’Neal, PINATOVA, mirrored paint on panel, 2014

How is O'Neal's choice of content, the Rorschach image, reinforced by his choice of medium, mirrored paint?

Reread the quote by Benjamin on the facing page. Interpret what Benjamin said through the jumpsuits, and explain the similarity with O'Neal's message.

Glossary of Terms:

bilaterally symmetrical adj. In which the left and right sides of something can be divided along the midline into mirror images of each other contingent adj. Dependent on other factors cross-platform adj. Able to combine distinct methods of delivering content to an audience discipline n. A branch of knowledge, typically one studied in higher education medium n. The material/s used by an artist to create a work multi-hyphenate n. A person with a hyphenated profession, for example: a singer-songwriter or actor-director, but especially a person with several such roles

Rorschach n. A reference to a psychological test in which a patient's interpretations of a standardized set of inkblots are analyzed to assess personality traits; developed by Swiss psychiatrist Hermann Rorschach (1885-1922)

triumvirate n. In ancient Rome, a group of three holding power; more commonly, a group or association of three people
